

Nashville CFUG News: The Scorpio Tour

Posted At : April 27, 2007 4:18 PM | Posted By : Cutter

Related Categories: NCFUG, SQL, Development, ColdFusion

You may notice the new Flash banner above, retelling the exciting news that Ben Forta is coming to Nashville on May the 9th. With reports coming in after the first week of this tour, we are all getting pretty jazzed. Daily reports come in on new features, functions, capabilities that are going to blow the doors off the other guys. Truly great stuff, and we'll have quite a few really nice giveaways as well.

We were discussing this at last night's meeting. Which rocked! Andy Matthews (who sits next to me daily at work) did a great presentation on Cascading Style Sheets. I'm already very familiar with CSS, but Andy taught me one or two things last night. Very in depth, and well done on his first presentation effort. You can access the Adobe Connect preso from the link in the Archive section of the Nashville ColdFusion User Group website.

So, anyway. Scorpio is coming. It's weeks away now, so make sure to go to the UG site and signup. For those who might be unfamiliar (or slightly familiar), Ben is a terrific technical author, with books on ColdFusion, SQL, MySQL, and more, and is a senior technology evangelist for Adobe. Not to mention his alter ego, Scorpio Man.